President Donnelly then introduced the speaker. Mr. Desmond said that he could go back in memory to the days when he attended Sunday school at St. Mary's church, and as he reviewed the parade he thought what a pleasure it would be to the late Rev. Daniel Kelly if he could be present for the occasion. He told of the trials and troubles of the early settlers and the change in the times which this demonstration showed. There is a the change in the times which this demonstration showed. There is a spirit of unrest practically throughout the world, a tendency for reaching out in the darkness for a new remedy for human tribulations. We have reason to hope that there is a way te restore happiness to mankind other than by legislation, that is in the good living of our citizens. The only hope of our republic now and hereafter is in the hands of men carrying the standard of the cross. The laity should follow in the footsteps of our spiritual advisors. Living up to the morals of the Holy Name society makes better men and therefore better citizens.

The Holy Name so-ciety has a message to transmit to the world. He closed with the dying words of the founder of the organ-ization: "In showing respect to the name of my Creator, that is my pass-port to heaven." Mr. Desmond's re-marks were heard with close attention and received loud applause.

A solo, Down by the Old Mill Stream, by Horace Corning, was much enjoyed and President Donnelly in-troduced Rev. J. H. Fitzmaurice. He said in part: I appreciate the suc-cess of this demonstration which was far beyond my expectations. What has taken place this evening is a cred-it to the organization. The multic pro-

has taken place this evening is a credit to the organization. The public protests against the sin of oursing, which is so prevalent among us. I have found during my stay here how loyal the men of St. Mary's parish are whenever called upon. As men they are a credit to themselves and as Catholics a credit to the church.

A solo, Scenes of Yesterday, by Chester Baker, was followed by an address by Rev. W. H. Kennedy. He spoke of the purpose of and excellent work being carried on by the Holy Name society and referred to it as the society of the Catholic church.
